Barbary Coast Walking Tour

The Barbary Coast marks the edge of one of America’s most hedonistic quarters. Before the discovery of gold 130 miles east of San Francisco in 1848, less than 400 people lived in the little village then known as Yerba Buena. Once the news of gold became world-wide, over 200,000 men and women made their way to California. Today’s tour takes guests past some haunts of the era and brings them to life with anecdotes. Layered clothing and comfortable walking shoes are recommended. The walking tour begins and ends at Moscone North.
